

The architect-designers Ludovica and Roberto Palomba created this kitchen for Italian brand Elmar Cucine. Apart from the sawn oak wall shelving, which creates a platform to display pretty glassware and porcelain ware, the contents are all hidden behind bright white lacquer door panels. Within the tall units, there is space for ovens, dishwashers and fridges to keep from disrupting the all-white aesthetic. The kitchen is available through Laurence Pidgeon and prices start at £20,000. palombaserafini.com laurencepidgeon.com
